

Dan Herve

1. `pthread_cond_wait` will block the calling thread and lock it until a `pthread_cond_signal` is received. Once this signal is received, the thread may renew its operations.
2. The first parameter of the `pthread_cond_wait` is `condp` for the producer because the producer is signaling its own pointer to lock, since it has reached some defined wait condition.